The Prince William Health District What You Should Know

Immunocompromised individuals aged 18 years and older who received a Johnson & Johnson Vaccine

Immunocompromised individuals aged 18 years and older who received a Johnson & Johnson Vaccine (J&J) primary vaccine are now advised to get an additional dose of an mRNA vaccine at least four weeks after the first dose of J&J. At least two months after receiving the additional dose, they should receive a booster dose of any COVID-19 vaccine, for a total of three doses. Per CDC, an mRNA vaccine is preferred over the use of J&J vaccine for primary and booster vaccination. Some recipients of the J&J vaccine may have already received a booster dose (Pfizer, Moderna, or J&J vaccine), without having had the second (additional) mRNA vaccine dose. In this situation, regardless of type and timing of vaccine received as the second dose, a Pfizer vaccine or a Moderna vaccine should be received as the third dose at least two months after dose two.

CDC also updated vaccine recommendations for patients who received passive antibody products such as monoclonal antibodies or convalescent plasma. For those who previously received these products for pre-exposure or post-exposure prophylaxis against COVID-19 or treatment of COVID-19, there is now no recommended waiting period for COVID-19 vaccination.
